

Join the professional body for Knowledge Transfer

'The Institute of Knowledge Transfer exists for those who are professionally engaged in making the exchange of knowledge more effective. I want the Institute to be of equal value to everyone involved in the process; from the innovators, to those immersed in science and technology, to those within the creative arts. The Institute's agenda is to be set by its members; it is the members that give it life. As the first Institute of this kind in the world others will watch our evolution. With the help of those who have already joined us, the Institute is currently developing the services required by members. Mentoring is one example and is an important step in sharing the experiences of a new profession'. Sir Brian Fender, President and Chairman.

Whether you're a seasoned Knowledge Transfer (KT) professional, someone new to the game and finding your way around, or just interested in what KT can do for you or your business, the IKT could play a significant role in your career.

Knowledge Transfer has been around forever, but a new profession has emerged to manage the process of turning technology, know-how, expertise and skills into innovative, commercial products and services.

The Institute of Knowledge Transfer (IKT) sets standards for the development of the profession and addresses issues surrounding accreditation, certification and training. The IKT is fast becoming a major force, helping KT professionals work effectively by drawing on best international practice.

The IKT is dedicated solely to meeting the needs of individuals involved in knowledge transfer; the professionals who make this dynamic new industry. The IKT is an innovative, independent, not-for-profit professional body, which provides a strong voice for the KT community.

Every member of the knowledge transfer industry is actively encouraged to become involved. Join us at the IKT by visiting our website www.ikt.org.uk or contacting us on 020 7470 4912, 07595 217910 or info@ikt.org.uk.
